BOND ISSUE NECESSARY.

Another important step was taken. The commissioners decided to issue $100,000 in bonds. It appears from the books of the treasurer that there are $127,998.70 in warrants issued prior to statehood still outstanding. This amount includes the furniture and other contested warrants which aggregate $44,000. With the accumulated independence in interest—the outstanding in debteciness in warrants of this class will reach $150,000. Why the old board did not provide for the floating of all these warrants when they did issue bonds is one of the mysteries which have been left as legaci for the present board to solve. As previously stated, all these warrants are drawing $ per cent interest. Bonds can be sold which will not bear more than 5 per cent interest. The Herald correspondent that they found the still, which is a huge "0-gallon capacity copper concern, at the Mule Shoe ranch, near the entrance of Sabille canyon, in which the moonshiners cave was located. The still hard been boxed up and left at the ranch, when they made their hasty flight from the country about a month ago, closely pursued by revenue officers. Revenue Agent Gates of St. Louis, who has had years of experience among the moonshiners of Kentucky, stated that the still and other facilities for manufacturing the whisky were of the latest type and valued at $500.

It is alleged that two implicated Cheyenne men handled the product of the still and purchased barrels, corn, etc. The confession has created a big stir here, and other very sensational developments are expected within a few days.
